

Radio Christmas is coming to town

Organisers are urging DJs to come forward and showcase skills

by Camilla Goodman
camillagoodman@trinitysouth.co.uk

IF YOU fancy yourself as a radio presenter you can sign up for a slot on a popular ‘pop-up’ charity radio station later this year.

Radio Christmas has recently re-launched and is on the hunt for presenters to get involved this December.

The project, organised by Duncan Dyason, hopes to bring all parts of the community together while raising money for Street Kids Direct, a charity founded by Mr Dyason to support projects in Latin America.

The station’s PR officer, Joack Gocher, is urging people to get involved in the show. He said: “I’m absolutely looking forward to it, I can’t wait.

“Each year it’s getting bigger and we still want local people and kids to get involved. The only thing you need to be a presenter is to be keen.

“It’s quite easy but no one is expecting it to be perfect, that’s part of the charm of the station, someone will muck up or get the giggles or turn themselves off, it will undoubtedly happen.

“First and foremost it’s about having fun and getting the Amersham community together to do something special.”

Mr Gocher added that the station is also looking for newsreaders and people to answer the telephone.

The bi-annual station first broadcast in 2008 and will air everyday from 6am to midnight, from December 1 until Christmas Eve.

This year, the station has moved from Grimsdells Lane to Chestnut Lane, in Amersham, where it will have one big studio instead of two small ones, and will have room for live bands to perform.

There will also be a webcam in the studio this year.

To help with the £5,000 running costs of the month-long show, the station is appealing for local businesses to buy advertising space.

■ Examiner reporter Camilla Goodman will once again return to the airwaves this December on Thursday mornings from 11am to noon.

To apply to become a presenter, for more information on the station and how to get involved or to advertise, visit www.radiochristmas.co.uk or call 01494 784029 or 07771 966221.